City manager's message

City and partners talk budget reality

By Gary Pokorny, City Manager

As part of our ongoing efforts to meet the challenges of a downturn in the local economy, the City this spring is conducting an important dialogue with the various non-profit partners that have depended on City contributions to help sustain their programs and services over the years.

Gary Pokorny

The City is facing a $3.5 million shortfall in 2009-10 and worse in later years. We must make difficult spending cuts that will affect our valued community partners.

The new proposal calls for reducing the height of the building from 50 to 35 feet and creating 175 more public parking spaces by using auto lifts and attendant parking for Broadway Plaza employees only on the first and fifth floors of the existing five-level parking garage.

The Planning Commission held hearings on Feb. 26, Mar. 12, and April 2.

The Council on May 5 will act on a general plan amendment, zoning change, and a development agreement.

TEEN FRIENDLY

WC Youth Council making a difference

These are the teens you want to read about in the newspaper — the unsung youths who are doing good deeds for their community and helping the grown-ups better understand what teens really want.

They belong to the Walnut Creek Youth Council, an energetic group of 20 teenagers (grades 7-12) who provide valuable advice on all things teen to the City Council and the Park, Recreation, and Open Space Commission.

“I want to represent the teen population and have a say in the community,” says Katie Lanfranki, 16, a sophomore at Las Lomas High School who has served on the Youth Council for four years. “I just want to make the city more teen friendly.”

Council president Daniel Weinstein, an 18-year-old senior from Northgate High School, agrees: “The City Council and commissions need teen input — we speak on behalf of the teens in Walnut Creek.”

Daniel, who has been a Youth Council member for four years, thinks it has been successful in making Walnut Creek more “teen friendly” and providing more safe and fun events for teens.

Over the years, the Youth Council has provided a teen perspective on the Heather Farm Master Plan, Downtown Library Project, Heather Farm Skate Park, and General Plan 2025.

And when they’re not dispensing valuable advice, the Youth Council has a full plate of community responsibilities, including:

- Sponsoring teen events and programs such as dances, job fairs, and outdoor movies.
- Serving the local community through a variety of service programs including Adopt-a-Family, the Gift Giving Tree, the Senior Anniversary Party, Movies Under the Stars, and the Spring Egg Hunt.

Lauren Sipich, 17, a Las Lomas senior and five-year veteran of the Youth Council, says the group was instrumental in providing input during the planning of the new library.

“I think it’s really important to Walnut

Creek because we definitely stand for what the teens want,” she says.

New members will be recruited this spring to fill vacant seats in the fall. For more information, contact advisor Lisa Geerloff at 925-943-5899, ext. 2424.

Bedford Gallery resumes Art Tours

The Bedford Gallery Docents are once again offering guided walking tours of Walnut Creek’s prime public art works.

Tours will be offered at 11 a.m. the second Saturday of every month. Admission is $5 and includes a free pass to the Bedford Gallery. The 45-minute tour departs from the Bedford inside the Leshner Center at 1601 Civic Drive.

Special group tours are also available for 15 or more by reservation only.

For details, call 925-295-1417.

New library story panels go up

Colorful new story panels that provide a self-guided tour and other information about the new Walnut Creek Library and its community spaces have been placed along the fence outside the construction site near Lincoln Avenue by the Walnut Creek Library Foundation.

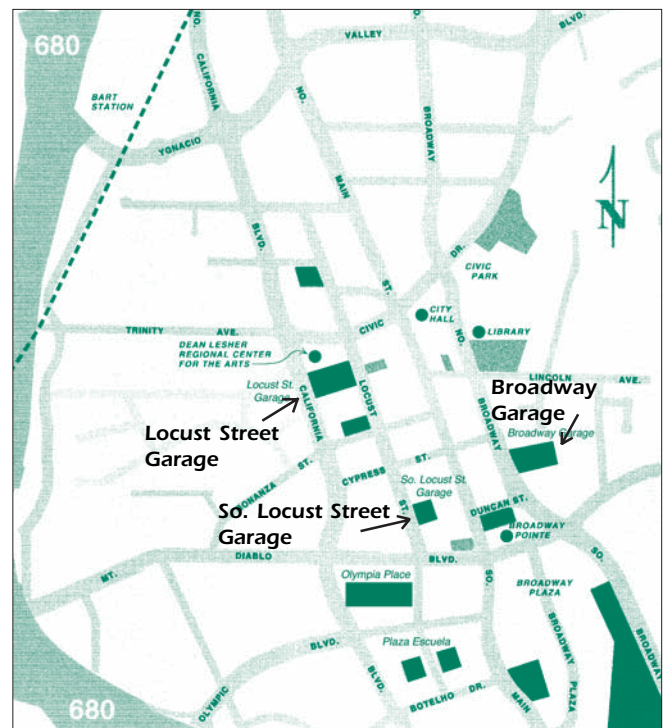

Park it here

Parking in downtown Walnut Creek is easier than you think, with more than 7,000 parking spaces located both on and off the street.

Besides the free private parking lots that operate at Broadway Plaza, Plaza Escuela, Broadway Pointe, The Corners, Olympia Place, and at numerous other stores and restaurants, the City operates three public garages (see map below for locations).

The City's garages may be the most convenient deal in town, as they still only cost 50 cents/hour, up to a maximum of $3 a day. Compare that to downtown on-street parking meter rates of $1/hour, or most private lots, which have a time limit.

There is usually parking available on the upper floors at the City parking structures, and the City's Free Ride Trolley stops at or near both Locust Street garages.

New electric charge stations in City garages

The City has installed electric charge stations in each of its downtown parking garages for the use of owners of plug-in electric cars.

Walnut Creek, the first city in Contra Costa County to do so, joins the cities of San Jose and San Francisco to offer Coulomb Technologies public network charging stations for electric vehicles (EV).

The charging stations are available to drivers who subscribe to the ChargePoint Network, which makes it possible for drivers to find unoccupied charging stations via web-enabled cell phones.

"We're on the forefront of this technology," said City business manager Matt Huffaker.

There is a $3 fee for each charging session, and stations offer both 110 and 220 voltage, Huffaker said.

"Our goal is to find out how great the demand is for this service," he said. "We hope to expand it. As more and more electric cars come into the market, the City will have the infrastructure to accommodate these vehicles."

Searching for summer jobs

Borges Ranch Open Space Ranger Dan Bylin, left, talks to high school students interested in a summer job with the City at the annual Teen Jobs Fair on March 12. More than 500 students and their parents attended the event, hoping to learn more about the 100 paid summer jobs (including lifeguards, camp counselors, and interns) that are available to qualified Walnut Creek residents this year.

City continues water conservation

As the region braces for its third consecutive drought year, the City of Walnut Creek is continuing its ongoing efforts to conserve water in parks, streets, and buildings.

The East Bay Municipal Utility District, which serves approximately 60 percent of Walnut Creek, has asked the City to comply with a 15 percent voluntary reduction in water use this year in response to another dry winter.

Public Services Manager Dan Cather said the City is continuing its long-standing water conservation policies by swapping out water-needy plants with drought-tolerant plants in parks, medians, and downtown.

He said more efficient water sprinkler heads have been installed in parks and sports fields, and computer-controlled irrigation systems are in place to fine tune the timing and targeting of watering.

Budget news

information with them about what is happening to us. We want everyone to be aware of what's going on.

For example, the City Council last year decided to reduce City subsidies by 25% to a number of our non-profit partners in 2009-10. We made this announcement a year in advance to give these groups an opportunity to adjust their budget expectations accordingly.

However, since then we have experienced a major economic downturn in auto sales, housing values, and employment that has had a dramatic impact on the local economy, and as a result, City revenues.

The unfortunate reality is that the City is simply no longer able to do "business as usual." The new state of the City requires major changes in how we financially assist our non-profit partners, even as we acknowledge their invaluable contributions to the community.

Creating downtown vision, 10-year CIP plan top goals for City Council

City Council members want to formulate a 10-year plan for new capital projects, create a downtown vision, and restructure how the City does business.

Those were the top three priorities for 2009 that emerged out of the Council's day-long strategic planning workshop on Feb. 27.

During the special meeting, which was also attended by City Manager Gary Pokorny and all City Department Directors, the Council identified the following five priorities:

1. 10-year Capital Investment Plan (establishing priorities for facility renovation and new facilities)
2. Create a downtown vision (transportation, parking management)
3. Restructuring how the City does business in the long-term (e.g., increase efficiency, assess programs and services, explore new revenue sources)
4. Public involvement in shaping a vision for Walnut Creek's future
5. Economic development

Foreclosures & crime: How to be on guard

By Amy Doyle
Crime Prevention Coordinator

The nationwide crisis in home foreclosures and bankruptcies has everyone on their toes. As foreclosure rates skyrocket and residents move out of neighborhoods, crime moves in. A 2006 study showed that for each percentage point that this rate increases, neighborhood crime rises 2.33 percent. Of the approximately 700 homes for sale in Walnut Creek this spring, 124 are foreclosures and 33 are bankruptcies.

When a neighborhood experiences numerous foreclosures, thefts often occur. Burglars loot abandoned houses, taking electrical appliances and copper wiring or scrap metal. Squatters move in to escape the weather, some even starting fires inside to keep warm. Occasionally, even criminals begin to live or conduct business in the vacant homes.

There are several things you can do to help prevent this from occurring in your neighborhood. One is to engage your neighbors about joining the City's Neighborhood Watch program. A growing number of Walnut Creek residents are actively involved in Neighborhood Watch programs.

Also, keep an eye on any vacant properties in your neighborhood. If you notice that one of them is illegally occupied, contact the Police Department.

If the home begins to become an eyesore, alert the listing agent about its deteriorating condition. A new state law requires the legal owner to maintain a vacant residential property purchased through foreclosure. The owner must also take action to prevent trespassers or squatters from remaining on the property.

To join Neighborhood Watch, please call (925) 943-5885.

Free vacation house checks available

Beginning May 1, the Walnut Creek Volunteers in Police Services (VIPS) will begin taking requests for vacation house checks.

To sign up for a free house check, go online to www.walnutcreekpd.com to download a request form or call 925-256-3525 to have a form mailed to you.

The Police Department welcomed a second German shepherd to its K-9 unit in April when Kar joined Orfas on the duty roster to assist in sniffing out narcotics and people.

Kar, who lives with his handler, Sgt. Joe Donleavy, was made available to the City through generous donations from WCDog (Walnut Creek Dog Owners Group), $9,000; and Safeway and Milk-Bone, $5,000.

To make a donation to WCDog for the K-9 program, visit their website at www.wcdog.org or send a check to WCDog/K9, P.O. Box 120, 1839B Ygnacio Valley Rd., Walnut Creek, CA 94598.

Time to 'Bike to Work' on May 14

Bike-To-Work Day is Thursday, May 14. All residents are encouraged to ride their bike to work or school. Stop by one of the Energizer Stations in Walnut Creek during commute hours and pick up a tote bag full of goodies.

Walnut Creek has unveiled a pilot program that offers City staff the use of bicycles for site inspections or other local City business. An initial fleet of two bicycles has been assembled in a grass-roots effort by City staff to support alternative transportation modes instead of using city vehicles for close-by field inspections.

A new Bicycle Safety Brochure has been developed by the Transportation Planning Division and is ready for public circulation. Stop by City Hall or call 943-5899, ext. 2251 to get your free copy. New bike racks and two new lockers have been added at Plaza Escuela as part of the recent improvements. Stop by and enjoy!

2008 Employees of the Year honored for outstanding service

They exemplify the highest standards of public service, and for that, Gayle Vassar and Karlan Larson were recognized Feb. 24 as the 2008 recipients of The Rosie Coan Award, honoring them as the City's Employees of the Year.

Each received a plaque and recognition from City Manager Gary Pokorny.

Vassar, who joined the City staff in 2000, is the community relations manager who coordinates the CERT and Citizens' Institute programs, as well as organizes community events such as "Going Green

Gayle Vassar and Karlan Larson

Together" in October 2007. She was cited for her energy, work ethic, and style.

Larson, a six-year veteran, is a senior traffic maintenance worker. He was lauded for leadership skills that helped his crew achieve high productivity.

Helpers needed for Creek Clean Up Day

Volunteers are again being asked to help remove a year's worth of debris from Walnut Creek's three downtown creeks during the 20th annual Creek Clean Up Day on Saturday, May 9.

Volunteers should sign up by 9:30 a.m. at Civic Park, corner of Civic Drive and North Broadway, where they can also pick up plastic trash bags. A free barbecue lunch for all participants will follow the activity.

This event is co-sponsored by the City and Friends of the Creek. For details, call Lesley Hunt at 925-937-6791.
