Balancing WC's future is focus of Council plan

The City Council and staff have come up with a more proactive approach to "restructuring" City operations that will make it easier to balance the City's needs and resources in the future.

Last spring, the Council and staff successfully bridged an unexpectedly large $18 million gap to balance the 2008-2010 operating budget.

After the Council approved that spending plan, it asked staff to prepare a 10-year capital investment plan (CIP) and begin "restructuring" City operations so that future budget shortfalls could be anticipated and addressed in advance.

At a special study session Sept. 30, Assistant City Manager Lorie Tinfow shared with the Council an action plan for bridging future budget gaps that would have a role for community members, the Council, and City staff.

The shortfall will echo the previous two budget cycles, where expenses over which the City has limited or no control (such as employee health coverage costs) outpaced lower-than-typical revenues

Commission OKs parking plan for Neiman Marcus

The Planning Commission unanimously approved an attendant parking plan on Sept. 25 for the proposed Neiman Marcus store at Broadway Plaza, setting the stage for the City Council's final decision on the project.

At presstime, the Council was scheduled to deliberate on the parking portion of the plan at its Oct. 7 meeting.

The Council on Sept. 16 unanimously approved a general plan amendment and zoning changes to increase the building height from 35 to 50 feet. The Council also certified the environmental impact report, clearing the way for final parking and design issues to be decided on the new, 107,000-square-foot store.

Neiman Marcus plans to open its newest store in 2010 on the site of the existing David M. Brian store at the southwest corner of South Main Street and Mt. Diablo Boulevard. David M. Brian is relocating to the former Gap store in the center.

Jewish Community Center

The City Council is scheduled to consider on Nov. 18 the Jewish Community Center's modified application for an 80-unit residential condominium project with underground parking and the rebuilding of its existing community center on Tice Valley Boulevard.

The Council rejected the original plans for a 120-unit project in July 2007 for being out of character with the neighborhood.

Co-op site

It's back to square one on the development of the long-abandoned Co-op store site on Geary Road as Silverwing Development has terminated its contract agreement with Pleasant Creek Industries to build affordable housing on the site.

The Co-op store closed in 1984.

Time running out to convert to digital TV

This is another reminder to consumers without cable who have a traditional analog TV that they have until Feb. 17, 2009 to convert their televisions to digital.

Digital TV provides crystal clear pictures and higher quality sound, as well as the capacity for more channels. This technology also offers other features such as enhanced closed captioning ability

Consumers have several options:

- Purchase a DTV converter box that connects to analog TVs and over-the-air antennas to convert the digital signal to analog. Cost is about $50-$70.
- Purchase a digital TV
- Subscribe to a cable, satellite, or telephone company service provider.

Sister Cities group planning Noceto visit in spring 2009

Walnut Creek Sister Cities International has confirmed plans for a visit to Noceto, Italy next May.

Planners say the trip would be from May 13 to 21 and include a two-day visit to Walnut Creek's first sister city on May 15-16. Other planned stops include Milan, Parma, and Bologna.

A delegation from Noceto, led by Mayor Fabio Fecci, visited Walnut Creek on April 13, 2007.

Survey results

Older adults 'flourishing' in Walnut Creek

Walnut Creek scores high marks with its older residents, who indicated in a recent survey that it's a great community for retirement because of its health and wellness opportunities.

The study found, overall, that Walnut Creek was rated positively by its older residents and that most seniors are "flourishing" in Walnut Creek. Many rated the city as a great place to live.

The survey, conducted for the City by National Research Center in Boulder, Colo. in August 2007, provides a fascinating glimpse at what the nearly 19,000 older adults (age 65 or older) living in Walnut Creek think about their community.

"With more than one-half of the Baby Boom generation at age 50 and older, the flow of older adults is beginning to gush into the demographic pipeline," according to the final report.

To better prepare for this aging population, or "silver tsunami," as it has been called, the City contracted for the study to assess the strengths and needs of its older residents.

The study showed that the greatest needs of older residents were civic engagement, information, housing, and physical health.

For instance, one in four older residents in Walnut Creek said they had problems in the areas of social engagement, social support, and financial needs.

The mail-in survey was returned by 539 older adult households, representing an overall response rate of 46 percent.

Following are some of the more interesting results:

- 79% rated local services as excellent or good
- 88% rated the quality of shopping opportunities as excellent or good
- 93% voted in the last election
- 78% rated the ease of walking as the most favorable form of travel
- 92% said fitness opportunities are excellent or good

The bottom line, according to the study's findings, is that, by and large, older residents are mobile, healthy, and engaged in a variety of productive activities.

"Older residents experience a good quality of life in Walnut Creek and most plan to stay in the community," the report concluded.

Walnut Creek seniors can get a lift from the City in one of its minivans.

National magazine rates WC among 10 top healthy places to retire in America

Walnut Creek was selected as one of America's 10 best healthy places to retire in the Sept. 29 issue of U.S. News and World Report.

The City's Sugarloaf Open Space was featured on the cover of the magazine, which also selected Bella Vista, Ark.; Boulder, Colo.; Eden Prairie, Minn.; Green Valley, Az.; Issaquah, Wa.; Longmeadow, Mass.; Portland, Maine; Punta Gorda, Fl.; and Reston, Va.

These 10 cities were selected by the magazine's editors as the healthiest spots in the nation to retire. Walnut Creek was lauded for its abundant open space, recreational opportunities, the Leshner Center for the Arts, and its "walkable downtown."

Among those quoted in the article were Mayor Gwen Regalia and Parks, Recreation & Open Space Commission chair Ed Montgomery, a Rossmoor resident.

Mini-bus service available to seniors

If you're a senior citizen needing a ride someplace, just call the City and leave the driving to us.

For nearly 35 years the Walnut Creek Seniors Club has offered mini-bus service to any senior living within the Walnut Creek city limit. Drivers are friendly and reliable volunteers who take seniors to shopping destinations, medical appointments, Civic Park Community Center, and other locations within the city.

Rides are only $1. To reserve a ride, call 933-1434 between 9 and 11 a.m. the day before your ride. For details, call 943-5852 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Hundreds attend City open house and 'Get Involved'

An estimated 300 persons explored the hallways and byways of City Hall, the Police Station, and the Leshler Center for the Arts during the Behind the Scenes Day open house on Sept. 20 and learned how they can "get involved" in the community as a volunteer.

It was a unique and fun opportunity to see and do things you normally couldn't, like walking into a jail cell, sitting in a police car, meeting the mayor, learning about the history of Walnut Creek, and watching street traffic on a big screen TV monitor.

More than 60 employees participated in the event, providing tours, hands-on demonstrations, and general information.

At the same time, the City held its Get Involved 2008 volunteer fair in front of the Leshler Center for the Arts, with 34 non-profit organizations providing information to the public on how to become a volunteer.

Volunteers are the backbone of Walnut Creek activities. When an important social service needs to be done, or an activity funded, or an event planned, volunteers are the engine that makes the machine go. Often, however, people who would like to volunteer their time or services simply don't know where to turn.

Following is a listing of all the non-profit volunteer organizations that participated in Get Involved 2008. To find out more about these and other volunteer agencies, contact The Volunteer Center of the East Bay at 925-472-5760, or go online to www.helpnow.org.

City Council Update

Two council members to step down

Two veteran members of the City Council — Gwen Regalia and Charlie Abrams — will end their public service Dec. 2.

After 21 years, Regalia will be completing her unprecedented fifth term on the Council, as well as her historic fifth term as mayor.

Abrams, a local traffic engineer, is ending 12 years as a Council member (during which he served twice as mayor). He was formerly a member of the City's Planning and Transportation commissions.

The 35-minute show includes 220 vintage photos and 40 tunes from the '50s.

Happy 100th, Ruth

More than 200 well-wishers turned out for a special Chamber of Commerce mixer at the Ruth Bancroft Garden on Aug. 28 to celebrate Ruth's 100th birthday, which was Sept. 2. Mayor Gwen Regalia presented the centenarian with a walnut bowl as a gift from the City Council and proclaimed Sept. 2 as "Ruth Bancroft Day" in Walnut Creek. Ruth's renowned cactus and succulent garden, which she started in 1972, is part of the Garden Conservancy.

City moves forward on variety of energy efficiency measures

The City is continuing its efforts to "go green" with a variety of energy efficiency projects that will save money.

Pacific Gas and Electric Company has begun installing energy saving thermostats in the City's municipal buildings under its SmartAC program.

Walnut Creek is the first city in northern and central California to participate in this important program that helps PG&E and the State of California avoid power interruptions without sacrificing customers' comfort or control.

The City's Public Services Department is also working with the Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG) Energy Watch Partnership on a host of energy-efficient lighting upgrades at several City facilities. Over 65 percent of the $68,041 project costs will be paid for by the California Public Utilities Commission and PG&E. The lighting upgrades will save the City an estimated $36,000 a year in energy costs. By the end of 2008, ABAG Energy Watch will have helped Walnut Creek secure more than $139,000 in incentives for projects that will save the City 862,000 kWh and eliminate close to 512,000 pounds of CO₂ emissions each year.

Meanwhile, the City's recent green efforts have grabbed the attention of area photo-voltaic solar providers, who want to partner with the City on solar installations at select municipal buildings.

Holiday safety tips

It's that time of year again when weather gets cold, the decorations go up, and everything gets busier.

It is easy to get distracted amongst all the holiday shopping. Keep your personal belongings such as your purse on you at all times. Setting things down for just a minute can invite an opportunistic thief. Take a second to securely close your purse to prevent someone from grabbing something inside as you're busy shopping. With the rapid increase of identity theft, losing your wallet can become a real nightmare. For more information on identity theft, you can go to the Walnut Creek PD website: www.walnutcreekpd.com.

If you have to leave packages in your car, stash them in the trunk or somewhere out of sight. Cell phones, laptops, GPS devices, and holiday shopping bags are a big target for theft. Most importantly, remember to lock your car, especially after getting in it.

Be aware of your surroundings. Walk in well-lit areas with other pedestrian traffic. Don't make yourself a vulnerable target by carrying too many bags at once.

Don't leave your car running unattended on those cold mornings. Take the extra few minutes to stay in the car when you are warming it up. While it doesn't happen everyday, cars have been stolen while warming up in the driveway.

Don't allow packages to sit on your front porch all day. Aside from the potential of being stolen, it lets people know that no one is home. Check to be sure you've closed your garage door at night.

This time of year can be stressful enough without becoming the victim of crime. Enjoy the holidays knowing you are being smart and safe.

Watch out for your neighbors and call the police immediately to report any suspicious activity at 925-935-6400.

LibraryFest kicks off fundraising campaign for new WC library

Having raised over $5 million to date in private grants and major donations for the new Walnut Creek Library, the Walnut Creek Library Foundation is now seeking contributions from families, businesses, and individuals towards its goal of $7.4 million.

The community campaign kickoff was the hugely successful LibraryFest on Sept. 14, which attracted more than 2,000 people to a wide variety of activities, from book readings to live musical performances, in Civic Park.

Meanwhile, excavation of the underground parking lot for the library was completed on September 26.

Gifts of $100, $500, $1,000, $2,500, and $5,000 will garner recognition for donors at the new library. For details, call 925-935-5395 or go to www.newWCLibrary.org.

Audiobook recording artist Simon Vance reads a passage from A.A. Milne's "Winnie the Pooh" at LibraryFest.

Members of the Friends of the Walnut Creek Library had brisk sales of used books to raise funds for the new library.

Free emergency response training to be offered

Don't be a victim! Learn to help yourself and your community in the event of disaster by taking Community Emergency Response Team training.

The free, six-week CERT course includes lessons on earthquake preparedness, suppressing small fires, shutting off utilities, light search and rescue, disaster First Aid, and many other response techniques.

Nearly 800 people have taken CERT in Walnut Creek since its inception in 2004.

To be placed on the notification list for the 2009 CERT schedule, email cert@walnut-creek.org or call the CERT registration line, 925-256-3556. For online information, go to www.walnut-creek.org and choose "Emergency Preparedness" from the Quick Links menu on the homepage.

CERT is a partnership of the City, the Contra Costa Fire Protection District, and the Contra Costa County Office of Emergency Services.

Creek Talk

Heed 'Don't Dump in Drains' alert

On your walk around town, you'll probably notice the little blue "No Dumping - Drains to Creek" metal decals placed on top of storm drain inlets.

This marking is part of the City's effort to make the public aware of stormwater issues. One important point to drive home is that water that rushes through the storm drains — often carrying dirt, trash and pollutants — is not treated before it ends up in local streams.

Using fertilizer, littering, and not cleaning up after pets often have damaging effects on local streams, as pet waste, pollutants, and trash can be washed into a drain during a rainstorm.

The City has over 4,000 storm drain inlets and most, if not all, should have a "No Dumping" marking installed. Student interns and volunteers installed most of them throughout the years.

Want to get involved in your community to protect our creeks and Bay? Volunteer to stencil your local storm drains by calling 925-256-3511.

City's Holiday Tree Lighting set Nov. 28 at Civic Park gazebo

Join Mayor Gwen Regalia in kicking off the yuletide season this year at the City's traditional Holiday Tree Lighting on Friday, Nov. 28 in Civic Park.

This free event, sponsored by the Walnut Creek Downtown Business Association and the City of Walnut Creek, will begin at 6 p.m.

Featured will be holiday music performed by the Walnut Creek Concert Band under the direction of Harvey Benstein.

After Mayor Regalia lights the Holiday Tree, Santa Claus will make a special appearance to pass out candy canes in the gazebo.

Hundreds of people turned out to Civic Park for last year's Holiday Tree Lighting.

Balancing

(primarily sales and property taxes).

Staff recommended that the City look six years ahead over three budget cycles — through 2014-16 — and move from “restructuring” to achieving “balance” between needs and resources.

In this new approach, there will be more time — 21 months instead of only three or four months — to find solutions to the structural problem of the budget so it can be rebalanced in a sustainable way.

Staff will look for more savings in existing operations, review fiscal policies and practices, come up with new ideas for revenues, consider additional revenues, and consider reducing or eliminating programs and activities.
